THAT THE

position of the book in the library of the British Museum is as follows:—
By this book the reader will find a complete list of the hymns of Dr. Watts, and a full account of the various editions of the same. It is a work of great value to all who are interested in the history of the hymn, and is a most useful addition to the library of every student of the subject.

THAT the Reverend Dr. Watts's Psalms and Hymns are not only the most used by Dissenters, but the most useful of any composition of the kind to Christians of all denominations, I think admits not of a doubt.
By this excellent composition, thousands of God's dear children have had their faith strengthened, their hearts comforted, and their hope encouraged to trust in the Lord. The Holy Spirit has so applied many passages of this Work, to the hearts of experienced and pious persons, in the promises of Jehovah, in A 2 the

the perfections of his nature, in the person of the Redeemer, in his offices, characters and relations, in the shedding of his blood for the pardon of sin, and in his compleat satisfaction to law and justice, that not only they have been encouraged to go on their Christian course with joy, but also evinces the Work to be of God.

HAVING been much perplexed myself, to find a line or verse in the Hymns or Psalms, (the Index in the Work directing only to the first line of a Psalm or Hymn) and well knowing, that many pious and experienced Christians do want, and much wished for, an Index to the whole, on the same plan as Dr. Watts's to the first line. And knowing also the great difficulties that clerks in churches meet with, in not being able, after much search and perplexity, to meet with a Psalm or Hymn suitable to the subject delivered; it is often, that a clerk recollects a single line, that has an agreement with the subject, but for want of knowing where to meet with it, is lost in a labyrinth, and loses the sweetness of the discourse delivered.

I HAVE sometimes come to worship in the time of singing, and have then wished for an Index to have found the Hymn which was singing, by catching the next line the clerk gave out. These were the material motives and and inducements to this laborious and tedious task.

I HAVE certainly no views in the publication, but to be of some, were it even the smallest, use to the Churches of Christ. If it should be acceptable and useful to pious souls, I am fully compensated for all my pains and labour.

I TRUST, no material errors have escaped my eye in the Work; yet, if there should be such, I beg the Reader would act the part of the candid friend, and correct them with his pen. I have been at no small pains, through the whole of the Work, to digest it in such a manner, as to make it readily and easily found, by a person of the meanest capacity.

THE Author is sensible, that an Index could not be wholly accommodated to the different impressions of Dr. Watts's Psalms and Hymns; neither did he know, until the Index was near finished, that there were more impressions than one, (viz.) the common kind, that is generally used both in the churches of town and country; he has since found, there is a larger and a smaller impression, and the pages of these differ from the common one. But as the middle or common kind is by far the most used, it is hoped, the Index to this impression will be acceptable, as it may be easily accommodated to all the impressions, by attending to the Hymn

Hymn and Verse, instead of the Verse and Page.

I KNOW not if it will be expected for me to say any thing in this Preface by way of direction or assistance to the Work, considering that the alphabetical order of an Index is so plain and easy in itself. But that nothing may be wanting to assist the meanest reader, I shall observe, that in the letter A, the article is separated from the rest of the line, and is a word of itself; for example, take the first two lines in the Index, page 1.

A balm for all your pains,
A blasting wind sweeps o'er the land.

As those letters stand separate from the next word, they are termed articles; and those articles continue, page the 1st, 2d, and a part of the 3d, down to where the conjunctions begin, as, "Aaron must lay his robes aside;" so that whatever line you would find in which A makes a word by itself, or stands separate, you must expect to find it in the first three pages.

AGAIN, suppose you wanted to find, "And breaks the cursed chain;" you will find, And b begin in page the 8th, but then you are not to expect to find And br, but in its alphabetical order; the section begins with And ba, and so on to bi, bl, bo, to br in the 9th page: and there-therefore always have your eye on the alphabetical relation, till you come to the letter you have in view. There is a fixed place for every line to stand in, in its regular order, according to the laws of an Index and alphabetical order, and it must stand no where else but there; and this point well learned, there will be no difficulty to find any one line almost instantaneously.

AND lastly, it may be necessary just to hint, that when you have found the wished-for line in the Index, suppose, for example, page 1, A hope so much divine, you have no occasion to charge your memory with Book I. Hymn 64, Verse 4, Page 48, but only catch the page and verse, and this leads you as effectually to your words, as if you loaded your memory with the whole. I could not persuade myself, the Index would be compleat without entering the Psalms, or Book and Hymns; as it may be of use in particular cases; otherwise it might as well have been left out, but in the case of a reference, it will appear to be fully as useful without it.

IN examining the different editions of the Hymns, I find some variations in the words, not only in the leading words, but also in the body of the line, principally in the last edition. As an alteration in leading words affects the Index, I have placed both readings under their proper heads, and where it is in the body, body, I have included the variation from the last edition, in braces, under the former editions, and given a list of the whole variations at the end of the Index.

N. B. The reading of the former Editions, of "Where not the Heart is found," page 108, being much more expressive and full than where the Heart is not found, it has no place in the Index—neither has "At the last setting Sun," page 134, it being absurd, the other reading is by far the best.
